Roger Rosenthal, J.D. An attorney and national advocate for immigrant and English language learner students -- who says it is important to understand the law and legal policy to better serve these students, Mr. Rosenthal will address Arkansas educators including U of A faculty and pre-service teachers.

Roger Rosenthal, executive director of the Washington, D.C.-based Migrant Legal Action Program Inc., will be one of the keynote speakers at the Second Annual ESL Symposium sponsored by the University of Arkansas CIED and ERZ. For more than 23 years at the Migrant Legal Action Program, Rosenthal has worked extensively on public school access and social services for immigrants and English language learners. During his presentation, Rosenthal will address practical day-to-day issues which arise with school admission, working with non-English speaking parents, the design of ESL programs, and the like. He recognizes the opportunities and challenges presented for districts experiencing major student demographic changes. He will reserve time for audience questions.
